Dual Diagnosis

This course is an introduction to dual diagnosis and will explore how we can provide the best supports to individuals living with developmental disabilities and a co-occurring mental health disorder. It will also look at specific strategies for supporting individuals as well as care providers with the following training objectives:

- What do we mean by dual diagnosis?
- What does it mean to have an intellectual disability?
- Diagnostic Overshadowing
- Characteristics of genetic disorders

Presented by Edward Fischer, PsyD

Dr. Fischer has worked 21 years with individuals with developmental disabilities and Autism. He works for the Developmental Disabilities Administration as the Psychologist 3 with the Region 3 Clinical Team. He is also associate faculty at two universities where he teaches clinical and forensic psychology and serves as dissertation chair and committee member.

*This training will be presented virtually and highly interactive. Participants should have the ability to access the Zoom platform.
